I was ushered into the parlor, and presently a good looking young lady came. After a few commonplace remarks, the lady got down to business. She said: "General Ellerbe, the sheriff has been around here with a licebe, down to business. She said: "General Ellerbe the sheriff has been around here with a circular issued by you, and he proposes to levy on our property for taxation. My mother is the invalid widow of a Confederate soldier, and she has not paid any taxes in four or five years. We want paid any taxes in four or five years. We want you to put a stop to this threatened execution." I told her that I was very sorry and would be glad to do anything I could for her but I did not see how I could stop the execution. Just about that time her mother came in dressed in a Mother Hubbard. When I looked in her eyes, I got scared. She said: "What you say, you, you old Tilmanite, you! You at the head of the government and can't stop a tax execution! Who was your father, anyway?"
